Fish 'n' chips. They're pretty much our national tucker. Now, we're sure this list will be hotly contested—we all have a local, and we all seem to be fiercely loyal to that beloved local. However, people are slowly opening up to battling traffic and driving across town for the promise of the best fillet available. And that's not the only thing changing. These fish and chipperies are jumping on the health buzz, creating goodish-for-you sides, ditching the deep fryer, and even introducing exotic seafood.

Here are our picks of best fish and chips shops in Auckland.

The Mariner (Née The Ancient Mariner)

MT EDEN

The most famous chippie in the village, The Mariner can do no wrong in our eyes. They've got a quirky pirate theme going on, which is all too amusing after a couple of rosés. Barrel tables and menu puns aside, these guys serve up traditional style fish and chips with a Mt Eden edge (grilled snapper please). As if you needed another reason to visit, these bad boys offer deep-fried Mars Bars for dessert. Need we say more?
